Challenges College Dean Who Spoke of "Lost Generation"

Today's young folk—the "Lost Generation"—Not if they can help it, and they think they CAN help it! . . . Today's article, the last in a series of six prepared for this newspaper, presents a picture of a growing Youth Movement that may greatly influence the future of the country.

By MARY MARGARET McBRIDE

(Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK.—For the first time in history, American youth has risen in its might and is planning to do something about all the things that are wrong with the world. However, the new movement will not be patterned after any one of the old, hastily declared, its vivid, brown-eyed leader, Viola Ima, aged twenty-three. This is to be an all-American effort.

"We don't get into national life now, but we are going to find places for ourselves," Miss Ima declares. "We must assume leadership without having been trained for it, but we shall train ourselves."

The first step in the pioneer enterprise is to be a great conference of youth in August under the auspices of the Central Bureau for Young America which Miss Ima heads and with the co-operation of New York University. From all over the country, according to the organizer, groups will send delegates, five hundred in all, representing such widely differing views as those held by the Young Communities, the Junior League, the Democratic and Republican parties, the Fascists and Silver Shirts in America, the Y. M. C. A. the Y. W. C. A. and the National Student League.

She gains support. The conference is this energetic young woman's brain child, and she has managed to interest in a financial way an astonishing array of rich and conservative older men and women who a while ago would have looked with marked disfavor upon any such radical seeming idea.

"We are not radical for these times," Miss Ima asserts. "As a matter of fact, the radicals indulgently call us conservatives. What we believe in, though, is simply common sense, and young radicals and conservatives alike are interested in that platform. We have to use common sense because the schools are doing us no good. We must prove our way alone, using our intelligence. But intelligence, thank heaven, we have."

"If you don't believe it, look at the evidence—the thousands of intelligent letters from boys and girls all over the country that pour into this office." They certainly do pour in—great thick tomes, more often typed than hand-written setting forth in detail the long, long thoughts of youth which evidently are both longer and more serious now than ever before.

One twenty-year-old's letter is typical. He writes: "You must have something to do for before you can live. I don't know whether I read that or whether it has come out of my own great need for a cause to give myself to. I do know, though, that unless I can find something soon into which I can throw myself heart and soul that I shall lose hope and fighting spirit. The pessimistic spirit of the times will get me!"

Miss Ima believes that the leaders who attend the conference will be able to go back to their communities with all sorts of encouragements for such nearly-disheartened young idealists as this. And when they have listened to her for a while, you are very close to sharing her belief.

Camps for Youth. "We are determined to be constructive and practical, not theoretical," announces this young Joan of Arc firmly. "The first question we have to answer is how to create jobs and

You will read elsewhere on today's front page that dictators, supported by the army, have ousted the civil authorities in most of Europe's nations. The map on this page tells the story with startling clarity.

In the wake of the World War's unrest, as industry is strike-ridden and the world's governments face chaos, we must resolve again that come what may we Americans shall iron out our troubles through deliberative study and elective action.

The founders of America determined that here in this new wilderness they would establish a nation ruled by civil law rather than the military, ruled by the people rather than a caste of professional militarists.

History proves them to have been wise.

Today's news proves yet again that they were wise.

A dictator has seized the republic of Lithuania. He was put out by a military uprising in 1929. He returns in 1934 by means of another military coup—thus proving that in any nation where the ultimate appeal is a resort to arms there is never any answer to the people's prayer for peace, happiness and prosperity.

235 Millions Is Reported in First 5 Months This Year

BALTIMORE, Md.—(P)—The South during the first five months of 1934 showed an increase of 136 per cent in contracts awarded for engineering, building and construction projects over the same period of last year.

Figures compiled Wednesday by the Manufacturers Record for 16 Southern states reveal that contracts totaling $234,716,000 were awarded during January-May, 1934, as against $99,277,000 for the first five months of 1933.

Road building leads the list of major classifications with contracts totaling $98,776,000 being let during the January-May period. Industrial and engineering projects are in second place with awards of $69,907,000.

Contracts for general building, including apartments, hotels, banks, offices, stores, churches and homes, were valued at $14,771,000. Public building contracts were for $51,262,000. Contracts called for $14,532,000 to be spent for construction of school buildings.

Lithuania Is Seized by a Dictator

'Baltic Firebrand,' Home From Exile, Stages Revolution

Spread of Military Dictators Darkens the Map of Europe

TWILIGHT LIBERTY

In Wake of World War Human Freedom Has Been Curtailed

TILSIT, Germany.—(P)—The German News Bureau reported from Kaunas, Lithuania, Thursday that Augustine Waldemar, former dictator of Lithuania, had returned from exile by plane, carried out a military coup d'etat and resumed the premiership. The report said that the military revolution broke out Wednesday night, and the army was reported to have the situation in hand, although allegedly opposed by the civil authorities.

Dictator for Three Years Augustine Waldemar, known as the firebrand of the Baltic, was himself the victim of a coup in 1929 after he and President Antanas Smetona had ruled Lithuania under a dictatorship created in 1926.

While in Power, Waldemar was one of the best-known members of the League of Nations assembly, and his insistence that the city of Vilna on the Polish frontier be restored to Lithuania stopped the wheels of the League on more than one occasion.

LONDON, Eng.—Fascism and dictatorial governments, like smallpox, are contagious and Europe is doing its best to prove the truth of the thesis. Coups d'etat in Latvia and Bulgaria have added two more countries to the black map of Europe where all semblance of liberty and democracy has been extinguished.

That war to make the world safe for democracy is rapidly becoming the most ghastly joke of modern times. History is repeating itself. Just as, after the terrible Napoleonic wars, the first third of the 19th century witnessed an extinction of free institutions, so is the first third of the 20th.

Laws Passed to Prevent Wearing of Uniforms

The sinister line-up is as follows: Dictatorships: Italy, Germany, Turkey, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Poland, Latvia, Bulgaria, Portugal, Austria, Hungary.

Twilight lands half-way between democracy and dictatorship: Spain, Greece, Estonia, Lithuania, (seized by dictatorship Thursday), Finland.

Free countries: England, France, Holland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Norway, Denmark, Sweden and Switzerland.

That Fascism is catching is further demonstrated by the fact that even in the free countries there are Fascist parties which seek to tear down democratic government. The result has been that the governments of many of these countries have found it necessary to pass laws forbidding the wearing of uniforms by political organizations.

Denmark was the first to take action. A law was passed April 12, 1933. Its object was twofold: to prevent German Nazis in uniform from crossing the South Jutland frontier and agitating for Fascism, and, secondly, to prevent Danish Fascism from wearing distinctive uniforms.

The Danish initiators of Hitler thought they had found a clever way to circumvent the law. They decreed that, in going to and from meetings, their followers should wear their uniforms or Swastika armbands, but cover them up with overcoats. The police brought several test cases against these fellows and were upheld by the courts. Now in Denmark it is only safe to wear such uniforms in the privacy of one's home and with the windows shuttered up.

Swastika Emblems Worn Under Vest

Sweden quickly followed Denmark's example. It passed a law on August 1, 1933, prohibiting the wearing of political uniforms and distinguishing badges. The Swedish spies of Hitler raised a great howl and ordered their followers to wear their Swastika emblem under their vests close to their hearts. There have been several prosecutions, but the law is so hazy that there is now talk of tightening it up so as to prevent the wearing of uniforms and badges even inside the house.

Norway also passed a law, based upon the Danish one, but specifically made exceptions in favor of Boy Scouts. The law is so hazy that there is now talk of tightening it up so as to prevent the wearing of uniforms and badges even inside the house.

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Returning from New York where he conferred with the Iron & Steel Institute in an effort to avert a steel workers' strike, Hugh S. Johnson said Thursday that any impression that the institute had rejected his suggestions was incorrect.

They listened to his proposals and took them under advisement, he said, adding, however, that the possibility of action on Thursday was unlikely.

A Third Insull Brother Lost His Fortune Before Other Two

Joseph, Never Connected With Others, Lives in Obscurity

By NEA Service

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—Joseph Insull, 76-year-old brother of Samuel Insull, lives in quiet retirement in this city, untouched by the notoriety which has followed the downfall of his younger brother's vast utilities empire and hopeful that obscurity may continue to be his lot.

Joseph Insull flatly refuses to discuss the affairs of Samuel Insull. He has followed the events through the newspapers but has had no direct communication with his brother. He suffered financial losses from securities investments in 1929 but was not involved in the collapse of the Insull utilities, he declares.

"Just a Private Citizen"

"I am just a private citizen, in no way involved in this matter, and all I ask is that I be left alone," Mr. Insull replies to further questions.

The Insull home here is an expensive but not elaborate brick house built in Colonial style and situated in a section where several of the city's wealthiest residents have their homes. Mr. Insull lives there with his wife, Mrs. Edith J. Insull, and a son-in-law and daughter.

Inch of Rainfall Helps Mid-West in Record Drouth

Total of 30 States Affected by Greatest American Disaster

GET GRAZING LAND

Pledge 75,000 Arkansas Acres to Aid Stricken Cattle

WASHINGTON.—(P)—The first optimistic rainfall note came Thursday from the Weather Bureau for the drouth-stricken Middle West—but the government continued full-tilt its plans for relief.

Twenty-five counties in Minnesota, South Dakota and New Mexico were added Thursday to the "emergency" list.

General rains of from 1/4 to 1 inch were reported to have fallen in sections of the Dakotas, northern Nebraska, western Minnesota and north-west Iowa.

Greatest U. S. Drouth

WASHINGTON.—(P)—A government report said the drouth would "materially affect the national food supply" Wednesday told why. President Roosevelt feared the situation had approached disaster proportions.

The president, however, said there was little likelihood of anything like famine conditions. The report said the ravages of the unclouded sun did not "mean there will be a national food shortage."

Otherwise, there were few cheerful lines in the most thorough review yet made of the worst recorded drouth in this country's history. Approximately 30 states have felt its effects and the continuations is turning portions of the West and Mid-West into semblance of a desert.

Heavy Losses Described

A picture of the damage wrought by the drouth was given by the Agriculture Department report. It said: "The great area affected by the drouth this year tends to prevent the adjustment usually made to meet local drouth conditions."

"Thousands, expecting rain, have carried their stock along by using every forkful of hay, straw, and fodder that they had on their farms. Death losses are mounting steadily, and, considering the large area that is in difficulty, heavy net losses, during the next few weeks at least, can hardly be avoided even should there be a normal total rainfall during the remainder of the season."

"The scarcity and high price of grain will tend to decrease the number of chickens raised and the number of eggs produced. The short hay crop expected, the exceedingly poor pastures, and higher prices of grain, tend to reduce the production. The same factors plus a shortage of stock water are increasing the number of livestock marketed."

"This will increase the market supply of pork for the next month or two and the supply of beef, veal and lamb for perhaps six months but these increases will be followed by reduced supplies when drouth liquidation is ended as farmers again hold back stock to increase their flocks and herds."

75,000 Acres Pledged

LITTLE ROCK.—Nearly 75,000 acres of Arkansas pasture land were pledged within a few hours Wednesday as preparations got under way to receive nearly 140,000 head of half-starved cattle from drouth-stricken states in the Northwest.

The University of Arkansas Agricultural Extension Service has accepted responsibility from W. R. Dyess, state relief administrator, for locating available pasture in the tick-free counties. The cattle are being brought and will be pastured by the FEERA.

Pastures Offered

While E. B. Whitaker, district agent of the Extension Service, was preparing a questionnaire to be sent to all county agents, he received a half-dozen long distance telephone calls from all parts of the state, offering use of pasture land.

The largest offer came from County Agent George Metzler of Clay county, who said 60,000 grazing acres were available.

R. E. Short of Wheatley offered to pasture 200 head.

Agent W. A. Owens of Lee county reported 6,000 acres available.

John Mann of Marianna pledged acreage for at least 100 head and said more might be available.

About 300 head can be pastured at once in Johnson county, Mr. Whitaker was informed.

Agent J. W. Sargent of Pulaski county, said he would guarantee at least

President Zamora Guarded Against Assassination Threat

FL—Spain Rocked

MADRID, Spain.—(P)—Guards surrounded the home of President Niceto Alcalá Zamora Thursday as a precaution against an alleged plot to assassinate him while bloody disorders including a farm strike spotted the territory of Spain.

The assassination of General Fernando Berenguer, brother of the former monarchist premier, and at least 10 other deaths and scores of injured in the strike area spread fears of an uprising.

The government ordered out the entire civil guard to hunt for the slayers of Berenguer.

Company Attorney Indicates Fight Will Be Thrown Into Courts

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Adopting a new formula for rate bases, the fact that the income of the Arkansas Power & Light Co. warranted a rate reduction of slightly more than 9 per cent to Stuttgart's electric users.

The City of Stuttgart had applied for a 20 per cent reduction.

The tribunal has no authority to fix rates, but its findings were reported to the Arkansas Corporation Commission and will be filed with the Stuttgart city council, which under the law may make utility rates.

Hamilton Moses, the power company's attorney, said the company would resist the tribunal's findings and take the matter into court if the tribunal refused to reopen the hearing.

The tribunal found that the company had earned $6,700 last year in excess of a reasonable return on its investment, on which it received a total operating revenue of approximately $65,000.

The tribunal is faced with applications for rate inquiries in many of the 200 towns served by the company.

Isgrig and Pettie Get Federal Jobs

Appointed U. S. Attorney and Marshal for Eastern Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK.—Nominations of Fred A. Isgrig for district attorney and Virgil C. Pettie for marshal of the Eastern District of Arkansas were sent by President Roosevelt to the United States Senate Wednesday and confirmation is expected within a few days.

Mr. Isgrig and Mr. Pettie were advised in telegrams from Washington.

Both have been mentioned frequently as probable selections, since last fall. Mr. Isgrig will succeed Wallace Townsend and Mr. Pettie, George L. Mallory.

Mr. Townsend and Mr. Mallory received their commissions on June 9, but they did not begin serving until July 1, and the Democratic appointees were uncertain when they will assume their duties. The terms are for four years.

Plans of the appointees for selection of their assistants will not be completed until after the senate confirmation. It was believed that Gordon Frierson, Jonesboro attorney who had been mentioned as a possible appointee, would be chief assistant to Mr. Isgrig.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Women Will Put Punch in 1934 Campaigns . . . Miss Roche and Mrs. Bowler Step Into Spotlight . . . A Satyr Leers at the New Deal . . . Budget Boss Goes Biking Minus Garters.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Some of the most vigorous and colorful of this year's campaigns will be made by women.

Miss Josephine Roche's bid for the governorship of Colorado is to be taken seriously. She is forceful and able, popular in her state, and has strong political backing.

The political backing, which is perhaps the most important factor to consider, will come primarily from Senator Edward P. Costigan, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman, organized labor, and Colorado's Young Democrats.

Ex-Governor Billy Adams, who has served more than 50 years as a state legislator or governor, hasn't decided whether he will also enter the race against Ed Johnson, the present governor.

That means that his nephew, Senator Alva Adams, hasn't decided yet whether he can support Miss Roche. This country hasn't had a woman governor for some time except Miriam Ferguson, in Texas, whose husband Jim is supposed to be the real governor there.

Costigan's political power in Colorado resembles that of Senator George W. Norris in Nebraska—a personal strength. Chapman managed his last successful campaign as well as that of Adams, and probably could have had the gubernatorial nomination if he had wanted it.

Miss Roche will run on a New Deal platform and her own record. She is perhaps the best-known woman industrialist in America, as president of the Rocky Mountain Fuel Company.

She has always been a fighter for social justice and made co-operation with union labor the keystone of operation in her mines.

Then There's Mrs. Bowler
Then there's energetic Mrs. Gertrude Bowler, Democratic national committeewoman in Wisconsin who may be her party's candidate to oppose Senator Bob LaFollette on the Progressive ticket and the regular Republican candidate next November.

Active in politics long before the Democrats amounted to anything in Wisconsin and a leader in the women's wing of the repeal movement, Mrs. Bowler has campaigned vigorously for nomination.

Many saloons, barber shops, beauty shops, stores and cafes are plastered with Bowler posters. She tells labor of its advantages under the recovery program and urges it to hold up strikes until industry gets back on its feet.

She tells the farmers how she sowed wood, milked cows, and planted corn as a girl. Thus far no very strong male competition has appeared against her.

An aggressive, earnest, amiable, and extremely active woman, she has a good chance of nomination unless the men drag out a dark horse against her—which is likely.

Aha, Dr. Wirt, Look!
The thing Secretary Wallace and Assistant Secretary Tugwell didn't mention in their public comments on the Agriculture Department's new classical fur by Gilbert White is something no one can quite explain.

Sprawled up over a mound, casting eyes across a couple of pumpkins at a nude lady in the foreground, is a brown satyr—horned, hooved, and playing pipes.

This satyr at first glance usually is mistaken for a calf. The beholder is so astonished by the languid, elysian, white-robed, loafing or playing characters in the pastoral scene—representing agriculture—that one may miss him altogether.

The way to spot him is to observe the girl leaning against a tree and some sheaves. She holds a stick in her hand and looks quizzically down at this strange being, who never should have been allowed in the Department of Agriculture.

Just Some Observations
Dudger Director Lew Douglas, who has resumed riding his bicycle to work and doesn't wear garters . . . Vice President Jack Garner, who says "Sit in the vice president's chair there and see how it feels!" a big, comfortable, settling himself into a mean, comfortable, morris chair. (The vice president's chair, a wood and leather swivel, isn't so uncomfortable, either.)

Censoring Films Would Only Increase Confusion, Writer Holds

Have been looking over the matter of the Fatman Bill proposed this past spring to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission for the purpose of censoring the moving picture industry and creating a national censorship of pictures.

The arguments used in favor of the bill (in which, by the way, Congress was "not interested"), could be summed up in a very few words. Better pictures, lessened production cost, protection of the home.

The brief of Mr. C. C. Pettijohn, General Counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in opposition to the bill, claimed it to be repudiating the N. R. A. to be "discriminatory," "confiscatory," and "non-enforceable," "impracticable," "unconstitutional," and so on, which in one syllable words means "it just can't be done."

And added and rightly, that the inevitable result in case of the success of the proposed censorship, would be new companies springing up everywhere, "bootlegging" worse pictures than ever.

Movie "Bootlegging"
Believe it or not, but almost all, if not all of the picture companies now turning out films have their own mutual restraining laws.

"If you think you see bad pictures," said ex-Governor Carl E. Milliken, Secretary of the Association, "then give thanks for what you do not see. It takes eternal vigilance to keep the public protected." And added words to the effect that many of the pictures that seemed shocked the public were thoughtfully chosen and retroactive in their effect. They put over subtle lessons that never could be done by the goody-goody show. We know this to be true, but however that may be, I think that a national censorship would fail absolutely, as most national moral censorships have done in the past. It would be a matter of more expensive bureaus and commissions to support, with all the red tape and political entanglements, loop-holes and evasions.

There were good arguments in the bill and basic truths in the opposition. But all in all I am glad it did not pass and I see only more confusion in movie censorship if any such bill ever passes pass. I sense in that case the danger of the type of pictures we have so far been spared—the French post-card type. It would be almost inevitable, I believe, because hundreds of small and uncontrolled companies would spring up, outside of all organization, and it would be impossible for the Federal agents to stop the avalanche. Not many people have the slightest conception of the enormity of the industry, even as it exists now. It would be ten times as large then and the millions of dollars a year spent in trying to cope with the situation would be well nigh useless.

Effect of Bootlegging
I think many of the pictures now turned out are very bad. I get sick of the pernicious society show that excuses every sort of social vice. I get sick of bad plots and suggestive lines, of low-minded comedies and low-down songs; sick of vulgarity and cheapness and punk. I dislike the "black" system that saddles bad seconds to good features and compels managers to take them. But all in all about three-fourths of pictures are good. The suggestion I make is to bring some force to bear on the existing producers. The public is that force. Boycott the "rotten" shows.

Motion pictures are big business out of money. Of course. But when they tell us the face of low pictures these will die of disappointment.

The public will get what it demands and nobody can save it but itself. Not even the Federal government. But in one way it is just as well the matter of such a bill as Mr. Patman proposed came up. It may worry some of the more daring companies back into line, and cause them to do a little more black-penciling on their own account.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

CHAPTER XXXVII
NOTHING could have fired Cor David's desire to see Donna quite so much as her reluctance to meet him. After he had learned from Madeline that Donna had not been married to Bill Swat, at the time of his own marriage to Madeleine, Con had convinced himself that, in spite of her repulses, Donna had really been in love with him. He assured himself that if he had remained single Donna would have become his wife.

It did not occur to him that Donna might fear him. What she had said over the telephone flattered his vanity. If she was afraid to meet him it must be true that her husband was jealous of him. If Siddal was jealous, he must know something about Con and he could have learned of him by only one means—through Donna. That meant she had not forgotten him.

Perhaps Donna was afraid to trust herself with Con because he might arouse an affection she was trying to crush. This thought pleased him greatly. As he shaved and dressed meticulously for the meeting he visioned Donna in the days when he had first known her. Small, lithe and exquisitely beautiful, he had thought her. The arrogant way in which she carried her head with its aureole of flaming curls, the perfect symmetry of her body, her daring in the ring, and her utter indifference to the admiration of men had all attracted him.

Though the two girls, Donna and Madeline, had looked much alike, there had been a distinction about Donna that always made her partner appear drab and colorless when the two were together. From the very beginning Con had doubted the statement that the girls were sisters, though no one else in the troupe had seemed to do so.

IT did not seem credible to Con who had spent almost his entire life under the "big top," that members of the same family should not only show such different traits of character but that one should be an accomplished aerialist, skilled in every trick of her profession, while the other, though not without ability, was obviously new to the circus.

Vividly he recalled the day when the two girls had joined the show Renfro's headquarters were in Virginia and until the season before Con had housed his animals with Renfro's. The showman had been disappointed by two European performers who had failed to keep at engagement, and had answered at advertisement in a theatrical publication. Photographs accompanied the letter of application, and Renfro had shown them to Con.

"They're good-looking, aren't they?" Renfro had said. "The Gabriel sisters. I remember there used to be a Val Gabriel in your line. Con, maybe you knew him. I think he was killed by a lion."

"Yes. He was a headliner. With was a trapeze performer." "Wonder if these girls are his kids. Seems to me I heard he left a family."

Con had studied the pictures and had advised Renfro to hire the sisters. Soon after that the girls arrived at headquarters, after can ceiling some small-time vaudeville dates.

Though Donna had admitted the relationship to Val Gabriel, neither girl offered any other information about themselves. But their act had made good.

From the first day of their meeting in the huge enclosed grounds of the headquarters Con had been definitely conscious of Donna. Though everyone was busy—and he most of all, with a couple of new cats to break in—he found moments in which he had endeavored to win her regard.

The fact that she had obviously sought to avoid him had pleased his interest, and by the time the circus opened two weeks later he had known that he was in love with her.

HE supposed he was still in love with her and would always be. His marriage to Madeline, her death and his nervous reaction were only episodes, interludes between the really important events of his life.

He found himself as impatient to see Donna now as he had been impatient for the winter months to pass during the years he had known her, when he had counted the weeks and days until they would meet again.

Ambition leaped into flame once more. If Donna did care for him—even if her affection were but lukewarm—he could convince her that she was wasting her beauty and talent in a place like Lebanon. A dead town and a dismal farm. How had she been able to stand it as long as she had? Divorce was so easy these days.

Grandfather Siddal's money was forgotten for the time. Into Con's imagination floated all the rosy dreams he had once pictured for Madeline—a engagement with a European circus, visits to all the famous cities in the world, his name—and Donna's—featured above all the others. He would build a new act, more daring and more sensational than any the world had ever seen. And, above all, Donna would be with him.

Perhaps the discouragement and hardships Con had known in past months had done something to his usual hard-headed common sense. He had faced disappointments so long that now, for a time at least, he was seeing things as he wished them to be, forgetting everything that might balk his plans. He was unaware of the glittering eyes of Mrs. Planter, hidden in the hallway but watching him eagerly, as he made his way to the office. None of the time Con had spent before the mirror was wasted on Mrs. Planter. Swiftly she took in the details of his appearance and even caught a whiff of the scented lotion he had used.

On the street, he inquired of a small girl who was on her way home from the butcher shop what direction he should take to reach the Baptist cemetery.

RECEIVING the information, he set out with a jaunty, care-free stride. He had noticed the first dancing snow flakes from the hotel window. They were coming down faster now—the great, feathery flakes filling the air. Con, who was in no mood to think of their beauty, pulled his up-turned coat collar more closely about his throat and bent his head against the wind.

The child had told him to walk six blocks and then turn to the left. The cemetery was a good 10 minutes' walk from the hotel. By the time Con arrived there it was snowing in earnest. A glittering mantle of white lay like a blanket over the mounds of earth, fir trees, sleeping rose bushes, monuments and tombstones in the old graveyard. A premature dusk had settled between the trees through which the wind howled as though a wandering soul, loosed from its tomb, were moaning its plea for a resting place.

"This is a hell of a spot to meet anyone," Con muttered aloud. "I hope she gets here pretty soon."

He shivered with the cold and wet. He looked about for some sort of shelter and, to bolster up his spirits that had dropped with the eeriness of the place, lighted a cigarette. But the wet snow extinguished the flame, so he stood whistling dolefully, his body braced against a mausoleum, his hat pulled far down on his forehead.

There was not another person in sight and the stillness and loneliness began to get on Con's nerves. Weird stories he had read in the past, tales of murder and vampires, of disembodied spirits, flashed through his memory and did nothing to add to his cheerfulness and comfort. What could be keeping Donna?

Then he saw her—a slim, hesitant figure wearing a close, dark hat over her bright hair and a rough tweed coat pulled about her. She moved cautiously, peering through the driving snow, stumbling a bit as her heels sunk into mounds of it.

Con did not move. He waited until she was within arms' reach. Then he stepped from the shadows and touched her arm. Donna screamed in a kind of terror and he laughed.

"It's me, Donna," he said. "Who did you think it was—a ghost?" (To Be Continued.)

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Cream Rouge Is Easier to Apply Than Dry or Liquid Varieties

Rouge-users are divided into three schools of thought. The first maintains that cream rouge is best, second that dry varieties are preferable because they seem easier to apply and the third that liquid brands are most flattering if and when you learn to get them on correctly. The first group—the cream rouge lovers—probably come nearer to being right than the other two.

Remember that cream rouge usually looks more natural and that it's easy to get on smoothly and evenly. Unless you have excessively oily skin, put on a good powder foundation before you start with the rouge. Then, using only a little at a time, blend it carefully on your cheeks. If you have trouble at first, put a bit of cleansing cream on your finger before you dip it in the rouge pot.

Dry rouge, of course, is put on after you've applied foundation, lotion and face powder. Dust a little more powder on over it before you step away from the dressing table and you'll

Norma Shearer at Saenger Sunday

"Rip Tide," "Thirty-Day Princess," "Cat and Fiddle" Coming

Manager Arthur Swanwick has announced one of the greatest weeks of picture attractions in the history of the Saenger.

The week will open Sunday and Monday with the return of Norma Shearer, co-starred with Robert Montgomery, in "Rip Tide." This is one attraction that Hope fans have been clamoring for.

On Tuesday and Wednesday come lovely Sylvia Sydney and Cary Grant in "Thirty-Day Princess," the story of an actress, a down-and-out phony actress—everything phony but her loveliness.

Thursday and Friday comes another hit picture that Saenger fans have been crying for, Harmon Navaro and Janette MacDonald in "The Cat and the Fiddle," and on Saturday comes the wonderful Yv Francis in "Mandala" and George O'Brien in "Frontier Marshal."

"Tiger House" at City Hall Friday

Hope Seniors' Annual Play Is to Be Mystery Thriller

A gruesome mystery that has baffled hundreds of people and held them in breath-taking suspense will be unraveled Friday night when the senior class presents its thrilling play, "Tiger House."

It challenges Hope detectives and would-be detectives to test their knowledge and ability in solving the weird happenings.

It is sufficient to say that the plot is sound and the situations are startling enough to cause at least an occasional shudder to wrinkle the most blasé spidee.

If it's something different the public wants, it need search no further—this play has everything to be desired.

Melvin Martindale Is Buried in Texas

TEXARKANA.—Funeral services for Melvin F. Martindale, 46, pioneer resident of Bowie county who died suddenly Monday night at his home near here, were held at 3 p. m. Wednesday at the Redick church, with the Rev. J. H. Phillips, officiating. Burial will be in Redick cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma Martindale; four sons, James, eliminate the possibility of harsh edges.

Liquid rouge is difficult to manipulate and it takes lots of practice to learn to use it successfully. It is applied before powder, of course.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a dull, aching ache and your health is full, thin often breaks out in blotches. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to give these two pounds of flowing freely and make you feel "top and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't take liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Remedy a multitude of ailments. © 1934 C. M. Co.

On the State Highway
Every day from my window high
We view the street as the cars go by Fast thru it runs like a ribbon white
The State Highway; and day and night
An endless stream the motors go fast
And slow-to and fro—
Thru rain or sunshine, mist or snow.
Some are lowly and small to see,
Some are fine and of high degree,
Many are trucks with a heavy load,
Passenger vans, on the up-hill road
On they go—to and fro—
Thru rain or sunshine, mist or snow.
Birds of passage are they in truth,
Man and woman, child and youth,
So they travel the great highway
Rolling along by night and day,
"Many shall go to and fro—"
Foretold by the prophet—'tis even so.

NO MORE YELLOW SKIN FOR HOWETT

C. R. Howett, salesman, writes: "J. C. Mendenhall, Evansville, Ind. I have delayed answering your letter as I have been waiting to see the results of taking your medicine. I did as you advised, took one bottle Mendenhall's Chill and Fever Tonic, without arsenic and followed with the chill tonic with arsenic and have taken two bottles. People all over my territory are complimenting me on my looks as my skin is no longer yellow and the jaundiced look and chronic malaria and chills have left me. I thank you a thousand times and you may use my name any time you wish, as I feel that I am cured." Mendenhall's Chill Tonic, without arsenic, should be taken in place of quinine for malaria, chills, fevers, colds, "flu" or grippe. Mendenhall's Chill Tonic, with arsenic, is the most successful agent in the treatment of chronic malaria, bilious, intermittent or malarial fever. Improves the appetite, strength and condition of the blood. Made by J. C. Mendenhall, Evansville, Ind., druggist since 1873.

A program of nuptial music including Barcarole, The Rosary was played by Miss Virginia Berry who wore an afternoon gown of pink organdie, princess effect with a corsage of ferns and sweet peas. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Charlean Moss Williams, grand mother of the bride sang two solos, "Call Me Thine Own" and "O Promise Me." Penalty in Hell Holland last year added to its penal code a law forbidding the wearing of political uniforms. Punishment is by imprisonment or fine or both. The matter is left to the discretion of the courts. So far they seem to have held that the wearing of a small badge or medal does not contravene the law, but that it is illegal to wear a distinctive uniform or shirt or large badges or armbands.
In Belgium the Parliament is at present discussing the passage of a law against political uniforms. Recently, when the matter was being debated in the Chamber of Deputies, twenty young men belonging to the Fascist organization, the National Legion, tossed down from the gallery printed leaflets insulting to the Deputies and declaring that, if the bill were passed, the Legion would take no notice to it. Twelve of the disturbers were arrested, charged with abusing the Deputies and threatening them with death. Switzerland has also taken action against the wearing of political uniforms.

Action in England Against Black Shirts
In Great Britain Commander Lockyer-Lampson sought to introduce in the House of Commons a private member's bill against wearing of political uniforms. The Commander, a sturdy Tory, admitted his measure was aimed mainly at Sir Oswald Mosley and his Fascist crowd of Black Shirts whom he scornfully called "dirty shirts."
Lord Winterton, another Tory, opposed the bill being taken up. He said the Black Shirts at present constituted no serious threat to British democracy and parliamentary institutions. Furthermore, he opposed giving Mosley the advertisement of a cheap martyrdom. The House of Commons agreed with him and the bill was not taken up.

Misses Bernice Cox, Irene Nicholson and Mr. Leon Alexandria were visitors here last week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Galloway. Miss Nicholson and Mr. Alexandria returned home to Shreveport Sunday night, while Miss Cox remained for a visit of several days before returning to her home at Mt. Ida, Ark.

YOUNG AMERICA

put ourselves to work. We feel that it is more important just now than getting up on a soap box and screaming about peace.
"Money is not the main consideration of those young men and women who, even though they may have been out of school for three or four years, have never known what it means to do a day's work for pay. They have to eat, of course, if they are to live, but what they want more than anything is something worthwhile to work at—something that will be of value to the world.
"I should like to see youth camps set up near small towns all over the country, and equipped to furnish training in professions and statesmanship as well as to provide wholesome recreation. As they were ready, those youths might perhaps be apprenticed out to the business and professions in the nearby towns. They could live at the camps which would be supported either by the government or by the community. Thus you would get a steady flow of trained new workers coming into industry and business.
"There are two courses before us. Either we may consider ourselves out of the running and accept the dictum of a college dean who classified us as the lost generation, or we may get in line for what is coming.
Miss Ilma, judging by the letters that come to her, has decided that few young people are afflicted with any political party. She thinks that is a mistake. Instead of waiting to start new parties, she advises the young to go right into the old ones, gain control and make them over!
Viola Ilma's first venture in youth camps was editing a magazine designed for contributors under thirty. While she was doing this she got the idea for the conference to be run by and for youth—and to answer, if possible, the question: "What is youth to do?"

Johnson Refuses

position to the labor demands. General Johnson presented his plan for creation of a special labor relations board for the steel industry, similar to that adopted for the automobile industry last March. But apparently it met with no more favor from the steel men than it had from the union spokesmen, who rejected it Tuesday.

The sole issue in the crisis is the demand of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, for a closed shop, the American Iron and Steel Institute declared Wednesday night.
The industry "is unalterably opposed to the closed shop," the Institute continued, and for that reason the demand of the Amalgamated "could not be considered." The statement maintained that workers' grievances are in no way concerned in the union's demand.

Committed to Open Shop

Emphasizing the intention of employers to remain firm to the company union system, the Institute said that the industry is "definitely committed to maintenance of the employee representation plans now effective in the industry, and to the principle of the open shop."

This was a direct rebuff to the insistence of the union spokesmen for a meeting "around a table" at which the collective bargaining issue might be threshed out.
The 14 leaders of the steel industry who took part in Wednesday's conference, with perhaps some added individuals, will meet again Thursday. But with grim earnestness they made it plain that they did not intend to yield on what they considered the vital point.

No less determined, a "Rank and File" committee of steel workers told Secretary of Labor Perkins in Washington that "all hell will break loose," if the union's demands for collective bargaining conference with their employers are not met by Sunday.

The employers' meeting in New York was carried on at headquarters of the American Iron and Steel Institute. An air of secrecy surrounded the gathering all day, apparently as a result of General Johnson's determination not to be questioned by reporters.

Although General Johnson had been expected at the conference about 2 p. m. he did not arrive until 4:45.

Letter to Agents
In his letter to county agents, Mr. Whitaker pointed out:
"The FERA has very limited funds for paying rental on pastures. The season for planting crops is past and idle acres on which native grass is growing can be turned into a source of income for the owners if they will put the rental price down where it can be accepted."

"It is our understanding that the FERA would prefer to make improvements on the land, such as building fences (furnishing all material and labor) rather than paying actual cash rent."
The Extension Service has been asked to locate between 20,000 and 500,000 acres of idle land in Arkansas that can be used as pasture. Each tick free county will receive 1,000 to 2,000 head of cattle.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep... Vigor... Vitality
Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes as filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.
If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 8 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS... a doctor's prescription... which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.
But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to get you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS... the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934. Foster-McMillan Co.

Rowe Hurls Tigers to Top of League

El Dorado (Ark.) Boy Puts Detroit on Top in American

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—A solitary hit off the bat of Charlie Gehringer in the sixth inning plus some unfortunate passes issued by Bob Weiland, gave the Detroit Tigers a 2-to-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians Wednesday and put them in first place in the American League.

With both sides in a scoreless tie and a pitching duel developing between Weiland and Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the sixth inning opened with Foxx grounding out. Goslin walked and stole second. Walker also was passed and then Gehringer came through with his single to score Goslin. Rogell forced Gehringer at second and Walker scored the deciding run.

Wednesday's game was the first of 30 consecutive contests in which Goslin has failed to hit safely.

The one Indian run was scored in the eighth. Burnett and Myatt singled, Hale, pinch hitting for Moore, singled to score Burnett.
